Dahye — Your Story in English v2

Nine answers — the easy version

Short sentences. Your real numbers. Your real stories.

“Tell me about yourself.”

상대의 기준을 먼저 살피고 끝까지 책임지는 사람

⚓ I listen first. And I finish what I start.

I work in wedding and banquet sales.
Every client is different.
Two weddings can look the same.
But the couples want different things.

So I listen first.
The date. The guests. The budget.
And the thing they care about most.
Then I suggest a direction.

After the contract, my job continues.
I track every change.
I share it with the other teams.
So the promise becomes the real event.

Clients can trust me with their day.
And my team can trust my work.

“What are your strengths — and weaknesses?”

변화 속에서도 업무의 연속성을 유지하는 적응력

⚓ Things change. My work stays steady.

My strength is adapting.

At Stanford Hotel, our team changed many times.

But the weddings didn't wait.

So I shared each client's status with new staff.

We divided the work.

Nothing was dropped.

My weakness? I'm careful with new work.

I want to understand everything first.

So at the start, I can be slow.

But I learned one thing.

Don't learn everything first.

Find the priority first.

Then ask the right team.

I'm still careful — but faster now.

“Why our hotel? And what will you do here?”

실무 경험을 바탕으로 한 단계 확장

⚓ I've done the whole process. Now I want a bigger room.

I've handled everything.
First call. Consultation. Contract.
Preparation, the event, and after.
Weddings, family events, company and TV events.

My role kept growing.
And one thing became clear.
Banquet sales is my long-term field.

I don't want to repeat my experience.
I want the next step.
Your hotel's weddings and banquets are known for [____].
That's the direction I want to grow in.

After joining, I'll learn fast.
Your standards. Your process. Your system.
Then bigger and harder events.
And steady results — for guests and for sales.

“Tell me about your job skills.”

상담부터 계약, 행사 준비까지 연결하는 실무 역량

⚓ From the first phone call to the last thank-you — I've done all of it.

A new inquiry comes in.

I check the date, the size, the budget.

Then I suggest the right space.

In consultations, I listen for what matters.

I connect it to our strengths.

That leads to contracts.

After the contract, I manage the checklist.

I write the BEO.

Menu, flowers, setting —

I share it all with the teams.

Changes happen. I catch them.

Nothing gets missed.

My numbers:

Weddings — about 40% of consultations became contracts.

Family events — about 80%.

And by the end of April 2026, our team reached about 90% of the yearly sales target.

I helped build that number.

“Tell me about a time you gave great service.”

고객이 중요하게 생각한 작은 부분까지 기억한 서비스

⚓ She mentioned the scent once. I remembered.

One wedding client cared about two things.
The scent of the hall. And the flower colors.
She told me this at our first meeting.

Later, the hotel changed the diffuser company.
I knew a good company from my old job.
Guests liked their scent.
So I suggested that company.

For the flowers, I talked with the flower team.

We matched the colors to the mood she wanted.

She came back for the food tasting.
She said the hall smelled better.
After the wedding, she sent me a long message.
She said, “It was like a movie.”

I learned one thing.
Clients tell you what matters to them.
Remember it. And make it real.

“Tell me about working with a team.”

인력 변화 속에서도 이어간 업무의 연속성

⚓ People changed. The events didn't.

Our team changed many times.

Maternity leave. New staff.

But the weddings went on.

So I shared everything.

Each client. Each event. Each next step.

New staff caught up fast.

We divided the roles.

No gaps.

I also took on more.

Company events. TV events.

Sales report support.

I learned this:

When people change, share more.

Then the team keeps moving.

“Tell me about handling a complaint.”

고객의 불편과 호텔의 기준 사이에서 찾는 해결점

⚓ The hotel has rules. But clients have situations.

After one wedding, the couple was upset.
The music stopped for a moment.
The candle lighting was late.
And they didn't like the partner makeup service.
They asked for a makeup refund.

First, I listened. And I apologized.
Then I checked the facts, one by one.
Our mistakes — I admitted them.

The makeup was less clear.
The client said one thing.
The company said another.

So I wrote down both sides.
I reported it, and we set a direction.

A cash refund was against the rules.
But their discomfort was real.
So I offered something else.
A hotel stay, or a buffet dinner.
They accepted. We ended well.

I learned this:
Feel with the client. Check the facts.
Then find an answer inside the rules.

“Where do you see yourself in five years?”

현장 경험을 매출과 상품 경쟁력으로 확장하는 연회 전문가

⚓ The person clients ask for, and juniors come to.

In five years, I want three things.

First — big, difficult events.

More guests. More teams. More decisions.

I want to handle them with ease.

Second — a wider view.

I watch the market. I watch the clients.

What they choose, and why.

I want to connect that to our products and our sales.

Third — my team.

I want to share what I've learned with junior staff.

Not just my numbers — our numbers.

That's the senior I want to become.

“Why did you leave Stanford Hotel?”

면접 대비 — 퇴사 사유

⚓ I'm not leaving the work. I'm following it.

At Stanford Hotel, my role grew a lot.

And one thing became clear.

This is my field. Banquet sales.

I could stay comfortable.

I could repeat what I know.

But I want the next step.

Bigger events. Higher standards.

That's why I'm here.
