Sammy — Class 3

The One-on-One

Your first week starts next week — let's rehearse the meeting that matters most.

W A R M - U P

One Week to Go

Next week it's real. Let's talk about what's coming.

What does week one look like?

Onboarding, meeting the team, first tasks — what do you know so far?

What are you most unsure about?

Not the English — the job itself. What's the biggest question mark?

What kind of first impression do you want?

In three words — how should your manager describe you after week one?

Five Ways to Open the Meeting

Your manager asks: "So, how's it going?" Here's how to answer like a pro.

This week, I focused on ~

이번 주에는 ~에 집중했습니다

I'm still getting up to speed on ~

~는 아직 익히는 중입니다

I've made progress on ~

~는 진전이 있었습니다

One thing I ran into was ~

한 가지 부딪힌 건 ~였습니다

Overall, it's been a good start.

전반적으로 좋은 출발이었습니다

Try it: "So Sammy, how's your first week going?" — answer in 30 seconds, using three of the five.

Five More — The Real Purpose

A one-on-one isn't a report. It's where you get what you need to do your job.

What should I prioritize?

무엇을 우선해야 할까요?

Is ~ more urgent than ~?

~가 ~보다 급한가요?

I could use your input on ~

~에 대해 의견을 듣고 싶습니다

Who should I talk to about ~?

~는 누구에게 물어보면 될까요?

I'll have an update by ~

~까지 진행 상황 공유드리겠습니다

The secret: Asking good questions makes you look prepared, not lost. Managers love the ones who ask.

Friday, 4 PM — Your First One-on-One

Brian is your manager. Ten expressions, one meeting. 🎬

1 • The opener

"How's it going? Settling in okay?" — report your week (Part 1).

2 • The tangle

Two projects, one deadline — ask what comes first (Part 2).

3 • The stuck point

You need something you can't get alone — ask for input, or for a name.

4 • The close

Promise the update, thank him, and walk out looking solid.

This meeting will actually happen in about ten days. Let's make it a repeat, not a first. ☞

Before Next Week

Listen & Shadow

Your review file will have this whole meeting — listen on the way to work next week.

One small task

Write down three questions you'd actually ask your manager in week one. Bring them next class.

And remember

Sounding new is fine. Sounding uninterested is not. Ask, update, repeat.

Good luck next week, Sammy. You've got this. 🙌
